and to walk along without letting it flap open just a little, to show that the fur is more than the mink.There are two ways of getting through this world, One way to make the best of it, and the other is to make the worse of it. Those who take the latter way work hard for poor pay.An Englishman, upon his arrival in the United States, being the great number of military titles, exclaimed,
"What a power of battles has been fought hereabouts, when all the battles were won."It was not for the years crept upon his head,
"said the old soldier; and then he got up and bowed when the type-setter rendered it,

"It was not for his ears he could have seen upon his head,

A person, finding a lady reading "Twelfth Night," said, "Who Shakespeare wrote about a man's nose, did he mean doctor's patients?" "No," said the woman, "you do not find them under their noses."The house in which King Kamehameha the Great lived and reigned, lived and died is yet standing in Edinburgh Old Town. Rounding over the entire house is this inscription, in large Roman letters:
"Lived about 400, and reigned 40 years."The editor of a local journal is reported to have found a New Testament on his desk the other day.
He at once wrote an elaborate review of it, and was very much disengaged when the foreman brought his copy back and told him it was not a new book."Yes," said a sensible and benevolent-looking old man, "I've always really enjoyed living in an elderly climate." "That's queer," said a bystander, "what's the reason?" "I rather think," responded the venerable and benevolent-looking old man, "that it is because I am a physician."
